Mind in the Making (MITM) is a comprehensive learning program that integrates current research from leading scientists in brain development, neuroscience, psychology, and child development from more than 25 prominent universities. This facilitated learning process is strategically designed to bridge theory and practice, based on the science of how young children learn best.

Please choose the MITM sessions you would like to participate in.
You must participate in all dates listed to complete the entire program and be eligible for a *CEU certificate or college credit. Information on how to register for college credit will be provided at the first MITM session.
